bring out his capital immediately and until such time as their capital is released things are quite difficult. "There are very few provinces in Canada that will supply the Dutch settlers with a loan", Mr. Jensma stated.

On her arrival here Mrs. Evers was astounded at the unusual building of the city and the large fields of wheat. "Of course we have wheat too, but ours is only a small country so we have to be very economical and not spend outland too freely". The buildings are much taller and narrower, especially in the cities. Wood is very expensive so most of the homes are built of brick and concrete with corrugated steel and tile roofs.

In her travels across the country Mrs. Evers hopes she can learn much about the living conditions here and the possibilities for the Dutch settlers so when she returns to her homeland she will be able to give the women of Holland all the information possible and prepare them for their great adventure.

Mrs. Evers and her family reside on a 150 acre farm in the northern part of the country. Her daughter Tjaakje is a teacher in home economics and her son, Luken, works on the farm.

Besides serving on the immigration board she is a member of the international board of the YWCA; the international Council of Women; international corporation of Dutch Country Wives; the international organization of the Associated Country Women of the World; and a member of the Women's Institutes.

She will leave on Tuesday for Toronto, where she will be met by Mr. W. Blome, who is with the Netherlands Immigration Board in Ottawa.
